Field Schools

Williamsburg Field School

The Department of Archeological Research at Colonial Williamsburg, in conjunction with the Anthropology and History Departments of the College of William and Mary, will offer a special field school in African-American archaeology on the site of the Rich Neck slave quarter in Williamsburg, Virginia. Students may enroll for six credit hours at the undergraduate or graduate level. Permission of the instructor, Dr. Marley R. Brown III, is required. The cost of each five week session will be $145.00 per credit hour for in-state students, and $390.00 per credit for out-of-state students. Campus housing is available at a cost of approximately $450.00 per semester, and reading material is approximately $45.00. Scholarships are available. Registration will be accepted after May 2, 1994. Please address inquiries to Ms. Ywone Edwards, Coordinator of African-American Archaeology, Department of Archaeological Research, ATTN: Field School 1994, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, P.O. Box 1776, Williamsburg, Virginia, 23187-1776; 804 220-7328.

Old Sturbridge Village Field School

Investigate the changing lives of the African-American, Native American, Yankee and Irish residents of the Leadmine neighborhood of Sturbridge, Massachusetts during the first half of the nineteenth century. Join the 1994 Field School team as it explores the material history of this ethnically diverse community.

The Field School is directed by David Simmons, Old Sturbridge Village Senior Archaeologist, and Ed Hood, Research Historian with the participation of Jack Larkin, the museum's Director of Research, Collections and Library. Application deadline is May 15, 1994 and participation is limited to 20 students. A scholarship is available to support minority student participation. The basic program fee is $995.00 and eight semester hours of credit are being offered through Tufts University for an additional fee of $465.00. Direct inquiries to Ed Hood, Archaeology Field School, Old Sturbridge Village, Sturbridge, Mass., 01566; 508 347-3362.
